MUSEUM NOTES.

Many New Industrial Exhibits Presented To The Institution.

The Museum is constantly receiving new and interesting additions to its industrial exhibits. A large variety of teas, a gift from Cobb, Bates and Yerxa Co., of Boston, has recently been added. Since tea is such a common household article, a little of its history will be of interest.

Tea came originally from China and was introduced into Europe by the Dutch East India Co. in 1610. It was a very expensive luxury and gained favor slowly. In 1660, Pepys refers in his diary to Dan Rawling, son the first grocer in England to sell tea. That firm still exists under the name of Davidson, Newman & Co. The price of tea in Pepys's time was 60 shillings per pound as contrasted with the present price of one shilling. It was the tea of this firm which the Americans threw overboard in Boston harbor in 1773. However, in spite of the "Boston Tea Party" after the Revolution, tea became a popular beverage in the United States.

Since 1879, the decline of China and Japan teas has been very marked. Their place is largely taken by India and Ceylon teas, which are more popular in Europe and the United States today.

The exhibit at the Museum includes the following teas: five selected grades of China Greens, four of Japans, four of Formosa Oolongs, three of Congou and four of Ceylon. Black and green teas are named because of their difference in color when steeped, this being due to different methods of preparation. In the process of making black teas, the leaves are withered in the sun, then rolled till they become soft and

"mashy," then made into balls and allowed to ferment thoroughly. After fermentation, they are sun-dried and fired either in baskets or pans in a furnace. Green teas are made from fresh leaves, withered in hot pans at a temperature of 160 degrees F. (Chinese method) or steamed (Japanese method), rolled to liberate the juices, withered again, sweated in bags and finally submitted to a prolonged and slow roasting. The process of fermenting is omitted.

A valuable addition to our silk exhibit has been given to the Museum by Cheney Bros., whose extensive manufacturing plant is at South Manchester, Conn. The new collection illustrates the derivation of spun yarn from waste silk and includes samples of different types of silk dress goods and decorative and upholstering fabrics.

An exhibition showing the process of the manufacture of rubber goods has been given to the Museum by the Deyol Rubber Co., of Providence, R. I.

The last noted winter visitants among the birds was a flock of six Canada Jays. These are very rare, as they seldom migrate from the forest regions of northern Canada, except when driven southward for food.

DEATH OF MRS. J. P. FOSTER.

Was Mother of The Late Congressman D. J. Foster.

Mrs. J. P. Foster died Tuesday at her home in Barre, where she lived with her son, John C. Foster. She was nearly 81 years old, but was, and always had been, a very active woman of good health, able to walk to the neighbors and to help about the house. Her mind, strong to the last. Always kind and helpful in every way where she could do good she was a devoted mother and kind neighbor.

Her oldest son, Congressman David J. Foster died nearly two years ago. At the funeral Thursday, his picture was placed near the casket and the beautiful flowers around his picture and covering the casket and about the room testified to the love and esteem everyone felt for her. The funeral service was in charge of Rev. L. W. Sanford. The body laid to rest in the family lot at Passumpsic. She had lived at the same home place for over 57 years, where she came as a bride. J. P. Foster died 15 years ago.

She is survived by her son, John C. Foster with whom she lived and was always tenderly cared for, two daughters, Mrs. Frank Somers who lives half a mile distant from the home place and Mrs. Lenora F. Sanborn of Washington, D. C., also one step-son, J. P. Foster of Brookhaven, Miss., and two step-daughters, Mrs. Bessie Eastman of Hartland, and Mrs. Mary F. Fish of Aurora, Ill., and John A. Skinner, adopted when a small boy and whom she always loved as her own, and he was always a most devoted son, also several grand children and one great-grandchild.

Those called to the funeral from out of town were, Mrs. Lenora F. Sanborn of Washington, D. C., Walter R. Eastman of St. Albans, Mrs. Cleon Brownell of New York city and Mr. and Mrs. James Foye of St. Johnsbury.
